

A unit for forming a molten glass bead has a fixed supporting frame; a guide integral with the frame and having a substantially vertical axis; a slide fitted in axially-sliding manner to the guide; and at least one feed punch parallel to the axis, connected integrally to the slide, and moved cyclically to form the glass bead by a linear electric motor connected directly to the slide.

10